Application of Animal Models and New Therapeutic Approaches in Neurological Diseases

Message from the Guest Editors

The aim of this Research Topic is to discover and integrate new, state-of-the-art preclinical models that can contribute to minimize current limitations from the classic animal models available for neurological diseases. Furthermore, new therapeutic strategies aiming to attenuate the symptoms and/or the pathology mechanisms of neurological diseases are also welcome. Evidence from preclinical studies, as well as meta-analyses or reviews assembling firm evidence on this theme, will also contribute to our understanding.
