Feature Papers in Biomedical Materials

Message from the Collection Editor

The Topical Collection “Feature Papers in Biomedical Materials” will comprise important contributions by scholars and Editorial Board members in the field of biomaterial research. This Topical Collection aims to publish the latest findings in this research field. Contributions that allow deeper insight into different biomaterial-related processes on all levels and articles that propose new routes for biomaterial-associated tissue healing or tissue engineering concepts are of particular interest. Thus, we invite you to submit studies describing new biological aspects of both new and already available biomaterials and innovative material processing techniques related to tissue-healing processes. We look forward to your submissions on the above-listed research areas of Biomedical Materials.
