Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue entitled “Novel Therapeutic Nutrient Molecules” will focus on the protective role of bioactive nutrient molecules as a therapeutic approach and against disease pathogenesis.

Our Special Issue will consider original articles, commentary and review articles that focus on the following potential topics (but not limited to these):

Investigations related to the nutrients of foods and their effects in improving human health.

Investigations related to novel nutrient compounds and their impact on the human gut microbiome and gut health.

Investigations related to the gut bioactive metabolites of nutrient molecules and their impact on human health.

The novel protective roles of vitamins and their metabolites against adverse health outcomes.
