Cancer: Immunology and Immunotherapy

Message from the Guest Editors

Numerous new immunotherapeutic approaches that have recently been developed can help patients with advanced cancers. Studies have demonstrated that the immune system can help eliminate cancer cells but only if immune cells are trained to check the proteins or factors that need to be checked. This special issue focuses on the prospects for cancer immunotherapy, which is revolutionizing cancer treatment. Therefore, this issue will provide advanced knowledge about developing immunotherapeutic measures for cancer progression and clearance.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Biomedicines (ISSN 2227-9059) is an open access journal devoted to all aspects of research on human health and disease, the discovery and characterization of new therapeutic targets, therapeutic strategies, and research of naturally driven biomedicines, pharmaceuticals, and biopharmaceutical products. Topics include pathogenesis mechanisms of diseases, translational medical research, biomaterial in biomedical research, natural bioactive molecules, biologics, vaccines, gene therapies, cell-based therapies, targeted specific antibodies, recombinant therapeutic proteins, nanobiotechnology driven products, targeted therapy, bioimaging, biosensors, biomarkers, and biosimilars. The journal is open for publication of studies conducted at the basic science and preclinical research levels. We invite you to consider submitting your work to Biomedicines, be it original research, review articles, or developing Special Issues of current key topics.
