

Special Issue

Protection, Plasticity, and Physical Rehabilitation in Ischemic Injury

Message from the Guest Editor

A new Special Issue on “Protection, Plasticity, and Physical Rehabilitation in Ischemic Injury” is under preparation. This issue will cover but not be limited to experimental, technical, and clinical studies related to health, ethical, and social issues of (1) cerebro- or cardiovascular disease, as well as its cause and pathology; (2) innovative treatment in stroke and ischemia/reperfusion injury, including thrombolysis and all non-drug treatments such as oxygen, hypothermia, and remote pre-, per- or post-ischemic preconditioning. Articles with clinical interest and implications will be given preference. As we are aware of your interest in the fields of neuroscience, neurology, and neurotherapy, we would like to cordially invite you to submit your manuscripts for review and publication in Biomolecules.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Biomolecules is a multidisciplinary open-access journal that reports on all aspects of research related to biogenic substances, from small molecules to complex polymers. We invite manuscripts of high scientific quality that pertain to the diverse aspects relevant to organic molecules, irrespective of the biological question or methodology. We aim for a competent, fair peer review and rapid publication. Please look at some of the exciting work that has been published in Biomolecules so far. We would be delighted to welcome you as one of our authors.
