Advance in Concussion and Sports-Related Head Injury

Message from the Guest Editors

During the Olympics, the World Cup and various other sporting events, the great success of athletes has become a hot topic, but at the same time, unfortunately, the injury of athletes occurs during these events. In particular, sports-related neurological diseases have recently received a large amount of social attention. The diagnosis, treatment and management of sports-related concussion in the short term, the impact of repeated concussion on chronic traumatic encephalopathy and degenerative diseases in the long term, and the effects of repeated head shock such as heading in young age groups are recognized as topics of interest. From this perspective, this Special Issue aims to contribute to the field, presenting the most relevant advancements in this research area.
