

Special Issue

Neurological Diseases in Children Series II

Message from the Guest Editor

After the success of the first Special Issue "Neurological Diseases in Children", I am pleased to announce a second Special Issue. This issue is aimed at all professionals dealing with neurological disorders during the developmental age: developmental neurologists, pharmacologists, psychologists, developmental psychiatrists. This Special Issue, like the first, aims to collect a series of studies and research on neurodevelopmental disorders, in particular on the recent discoveries concerning their etiopathogenesis and therapeutic treatment. Epilepsies in childhood and the new discoveries concerning the genes that cause them will also be studied. Other topics of interest for this second Special Issue are neuromuscular diseases and rare genetic syndromes. The issue also addresses new drug treatments that are used in the treatment of neurological disorders during the developmental age.
