Developments in Palliative Care in Neurology

Message from the Guest Editors

Palliative care is becoming increasingly established taking into consideration people with chronic progressive neurological diseases, including closer collaborations with neurological services, involvement in multidisciplinary teams and inclusion within guidelines and care pathways. Although there is an increasing evidence base, there is a need for research into many aspects of palliative care provision, including the level of involvement, the role of specialist palliative care, the timing of involvement, communication issues, ethical issues and educational needs for palliative care and neurology. This Special Issue provides an opportunity for such research to be recognized and published, and to increase the awareness of palliative care for neurological patients across the neurological community.
