

Special Issue

Prefrontal Cortex and Cognitive-Emotional Functions

Message from the Guest Editors

The development of the prefrontal cortex has contributed enormously to the human civilization process, enabling us to gain a dominant role in the world. In this issue, we aim to provide a collection of high-quality theoretical/research articles providing new insights on the role of prefrontal cortex in cognitive and affective processing. We welcome multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary contributions. A non-exhaustive list of potential papers may include research involving the use of neurophysiological techniques in healthy humans, clinical populations, and animal models. With regard to the format of papers, we will consider research articles, opinion/perspective articles, and review articles (narrative review, systematic review, meta-analysis).
