Stroke 2021: Recent Advances in Stroke Neuroprotection and Repair

Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues, Stroke is not only a prominent fatal disease but also the leading cause of disability worldwide. The cruel aspect of stroke is that it leaves people with severe functional disability and/or cognitive impairment. Stroke has a great impact on the economies worldwide, as it is estimated that about 10% of the male population and 8% of the female population are handicapped. Such people need personal help in their everyday life and must be materially supported by social services. Understanding the pathology of stroke in all its aspects may lead to the creation of a protocol of treatment that can prevent the assault. We hope that the present Special Issue will be of interest and value for all physicians/practitioners.
