Bipolar Disorders: Progressing from Bench to Bedside

Message from the Guest Editor

The key aim of this Special Issue is to bring together cutting-edge topics focused on how we can help people affected by bipolar disorders. The main reason for this is that, in spite of notable advances in academic examinations surrounding bipolar disorders, we do not yet have evidence that this progress is reaching the 'bedside'. Recent developments in the field show real potential for interdisciplinary collaborative research to better integrate domains including neurobiological, neuropsychological, social and clinical facets towards a better comprehension of pathogenesis and mechanisms of illness, and, critically, to prioritise translational approaches to help improve the lives of people affected by bipolar disorders.
