Special Issue

Neurological Research on Learning, Reward and Decision Making

Message from the Guest Editor

We invite you to participate in a Special Issue of Brain Sciences, focusing on advances in the field of reward and motivation. The study of motivation incorporates a variety of fields including: Social, behavioral, cognitive, and neuroscience, and the goal of this issue is to highlight developments across a variety of methodological approaches. We will include integrative and diverse explorations of motivation's impact on behaviour, learning, and decision-making. We invite original empirical articles, meta-analyses and critical reviews for submission.
