New Study on Supply Chains after COVID-19

Message from the Guest Editor

COVID-19 had a massive impact on the supply chain, creating a great deal of instability. To solve the challenges associated with this instability, academia needs to contribute to identifying possible solutions through authentic research. The development of new or modified ways to resolve the supply chain network is the top priority for many businesses. This Special Issue aims to collect state-of-the-art research work and interesting results surrounding topics including but not limited to: post-COVID-19 supply chain networks, international supply chain, domestic supply chain, supply chain disruptions, supply chain resilience, supply chain policy, and circular economy. Any kind of modified or new framework for supply chain networks is welcome to add more value to eliminate supply chain bottlenecks. In this Special Issue, original research papers and comprehensive review papers are both welcomed. We look forward to receiving your contributions. Kind regards,

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

It is our pleasure to inaugurate the new open access journal, Businesses (ISSN 2673-7116). Businesses is an international, peer-reviewed, open access journal (free for readers), which publishes original empirical, theoretical and management practice articles on all areas of business and other disciplines such as economics, psychology, sociology, anthropology and history. The aim is to provide a platform for research and findings of business studies and related topics, including entrepreneurship research, finance and accounting, economy and business, strategic management, business and industrial marketing, business and environment, business history, business law, etc. Some examples from my own research on these kinds of topics are papers on an industry management practices or entrepreneurial behaviour. There are many other topics that are also appropriate for Businesses.
