Message from the Guest Editors

The pharmacotherapy of cancer has experienced some encouraging novel developments. A new armamentarium of anticancer drugs and their delivery have led to improvements not only in efficacy and safety profiles but also the quality of life both pre and post treatment.

This Special Issue of Cancers will cover theoretical and applied aspects of cancer drug discovery, formulation, product development, and clinical practices. Submissions presenting research related to chemical identification, in vitro/in vivo/in silico evaluation of anticancer agents, including natural products, or complementary medicine in original research and review articles are welcome.

Deadline for manuscript submissions:
