Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue of Cancers will consist of selected papers from the 44th Congress of the European Radiation Research Society (<http://www.err2018.hu>) taking place in Pécs (Hungary), on 21–25 August, 2018. The European Radiation Research Society (ERRS; <http://www.errs.eu/>) was established in 1959 to encourage international cooperation and communication in all fields of radiation research. This Meeting will provide a forum enabling the exchange of scientific ideas among all participating scientists and clinicians of various countries within the field of radiation. The research topics of the meeting cover diverse and exciting fields of radiation science such as stem cell radiation biology; individual radiosensitivity and radiosusceptibility; radiation and exosomes; repair of radiation-induced DNA damage; radiation-induced inter- and intracellular signalling; radiation effects on the immune system.
