Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Quality of life (QoL) has become one of the most relevant goals and endpoints in gynecological cancer management, taking into consideration the patient's perspective to support the treatment decision-making process. This Special Issue attempts to highlight this relevant endpoint with the aim of increasing the awareness of this topic in clinical practice. For this reason, we hope to include articles from patient perspectives, as well as from doctor perspectives in taboo fields, including sexuality and end-of-life management. Furthermore, in general, quality of life issues are neglected in the increasingly more relevant space of long-term survivorship.

Cancers (ISSN 2072-6694) is an international, online journal addressing both clinical and basic science issues related to cancer research. The journal will continue its open access format, which will certainly evolve to ensure that the journal takes full advantage of the rapidly changing world of information and knowledge dissemination. It publishes high-quality clinical, translational, and basic science research on cancer prevention, initiation, progression, and treatment, as well as other related topics, particularly to capture the most seminal studies in the rapidly growing area of immunology, immunotherapy, and tumor microenvironment.
