Research and Treatment of Hepatocellular Carcinoma

Message from the Guest Editor

Hepatocellular carcinoma (HCC) remains a leading cause of cancer-related mortality worldwide, driven by factors such as chronic liver disease, viral hepatitis, and metabolic disorders. This Special Issue highlights recent advances in HCC research, including molecular pathogenesis, diagnostic biomarkers, and innovative therapeutic strategies such as immunotherapy, targeted therapy, and combination treatments. It also explores challenges in early detection, treatment resistance, and personalized medicine. By integrating cutting-edge research and clinical insights, this collection aims to foster interdisciplinary collaboration and improve outcomes for HCC patients. Contributions from experts provide a comprehensive overview of current progress and future directions in HCC management.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Cancers (ISSN 2072-6694) is an international, online journal addressing both clinical and basic science issues related to cancer research. The journal will continue its open access format, which will certainly evolve to ensure that the journal takes full advantage of the rapidly changing world of information and knowledge dissemination. It publishes high-quality clinical, translational, and basic science research on cancer prevention, initiation, progression, and treatment, as well as other related topics, particularly to capture the most seminal studies in the rapidly growing area of immunology, immunotherapy, and tumor microenvironment.
