Brain Tumors—Related Cognitive Impairment

Message from the Guest Editors

We are pleased to announce a call for papers for a Special Issue of the journal Cancers entitled "Brain Tumors—Related Cognitive Impairment". This Special Issue aims to provide a platform for the latest research and developments in understanding the effects of brain tumors and their treatments on cognitive functions in patients. We invite you to submit original research articles and reviews that explore various aspects of this important topic, including but not limited to the following: The effects of specific treatments (surgery, chemotherapy, radiation, etc.) in brain tumors on cognitive function, including aphasia. Interventions and strategies to mitigate cognitive decline in patients with brain tumors. Patient (proxy)-reported outcomes on cognitive functions before and/or after brain tumor treatment. We believe that your insights and contributions will significantly enrich the field of brain tumor-related cognitive impairment and provide valuable information for researchers and clinicians.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Cancers (ISSN 2072-6694) is an international, online journal addressing both clinical and basic science issues related to cancer research. The journal will continue its open access format, which will certainly evolve to ensure that the journal takes full advantage of the rapidly changing world of information and knowledge dissemination. It publishes high-quality clinical, translational, and basic science research on cancer prevention, initiation, progression, and treatment, as well as other related topics, particularly to capture the most seminal studies in the rapidly growing area of immunology, immunotherapy, and tumor microenvironment.
