Genetic Changes in CNS Neoplasms

Message from the Guest Editor

The genetics of brain tumors are increasingly understood to drive genesis, diagnosis, prognosis, and, to an extent, even the treatment of brain tumors, be it primary or secondary CNS neoplasms. This Special Issue is dedicated to providing new insights for scientists and clinicians in the neuro-oncology space regarding the genetics/genomics of brain tumors. In this Special Issue, original research articles and reviews are welcome to be submitted. Research areas may include, but are not limited to, genetics/genomics research focused on the following areas:

- Primary brain tumors;
- Secondary brain tumors;
- Brain metastasis;
- Glioma;
- Other CNS neoplasms.

I look forward to receiving your contributions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Cancers is an international online journal addressing both clinical and basic science issues related to cancer research. The journal is publishing in Open Access format, which will certainly evolve to ensure that the journal takes full advantage of the rapidly changing world of information and knowledge dissemination. It publishes high-quality clinical, translational, and basic science research on cancer prevention, initiation, progression, and treatment, as well as other related topics, particularly to capture the most seminal studies in the rapidly growing area of immunology, immunotherapy, and tumor microenvironment.
