Advances in the Management of Oropharyngeal Cancer: Navigating the HPV-Associated Landscape

Message from the Guest Editor

We are pleased to introduce this Special Issue dedicated to the comprehensive exploration of the latest advancements in the management of oropharyngeal cancer, a complex and increasingly prevalent malignancy that poses significant challenges to both patients and healthcare providers. Over recent years, the landscape of oropharyngeal cancer has changed dramatically, marked by a notable increase in cases associated with human papillomavirus (HPV) infection. This issue will provide an in-depth examination of various facets of oropharyngeal cancer, encompassing topics ranging from screening and epidemiology to clinical trials, surgical interventions, radiation therapy, surveillance including novel liquid biopsy methods, chemotherapy, complications associated with treatment, reconstructive options, and the management of recurrent and metastatic disease.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Cancers is an international online journal addressing both clinical and basic science issues related to cancer research. The journal is publishing in Open Access format, which will certainly evolve to ensure that the journal takes full advantage of the rapidly changing world of information and knowledge dissemination. It publishes high-quality clinical, translational, and basic science research on cancer prevention, initiation, progression, and treatment, as well as other related topics, particularly to capture the most seminal studies in the rapidly growing area of immunology, immunotherapy, and tumor microenvironment.
