

Special Issue

Primary and Recurrent Gynecological Cancer: Epidemiology, Management and New Therapies

Message from the Guest Editors

There are significant geographical variations in the incidence of gynecological cancers worldwide. Patient outcomes depend on understanding tumor biology, prevention and screening, timely interventions and appropriate treatment. Additionally, epidemiological studies can help policy makers direct precious resources and shape healthcare systems. We would therefore like to invite authors to contribute to this Special Issue, which focuses on new developments, such as the incidence and prevalence of women's cancers, lifestyle factors, investigative pathways, genetic testing, new staging systems, quality of life, adjunctive treatment algorithms and the impact of low resources on patient survival.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Cancers (ISSN 2072-6694) is an international, online journal addressing both clinical and basic science issues related to cancer research. The journal will continue its open access format, which will certainly evolve to ensure that the journal takes full advantage of the rapidly changing world of information and knowledge dissemination. It publishes high-quality clinical, translational, and basic science research on cancer prevention, initiation, progression, and treatment, as well as other related topics, particularly to capture the most seminal studies in the rapidly growing area of immunology, immunotherapy, and tumor microenvironment.
