Insights into the Pathogenesis of Cutaneous T-Cell Lymphoma and the Impact of These Potential Biomarkers on Future Diagnosis, Prognosis and Treatment

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue will address novel insights into the pathogenesis of primary cutaneous T-cell lymphoma (CTCL), specifically genomic abnormalities, the tumor micro-environment and the host immune landscape. An improved understanding of these potential biomarkers will be discussed in the context of their contribution to the development of innovative platforms to improve the diagnostic and prognostic models for CTCL. Critically, contributors discuss how these insights will enable better treatment options for CTCL

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Cancers is an international online journal addressing both clinical and basic science issues related to cancer research. The journal is publishing in Open Access format, which will certainly evolve to ensure that the journal takes full advantage of the rapidly changing world of information and knowledge dissemination. It publishes high-quality clinical, translational, and basic science research on cancer prevention, initiation, progression, and treatment, as well as other related topics, particularly to capture the most seminal studies in the rapidly growing area of immunology, immunotherapy, and tumor microenvironment.
