Epidemiology of Cancer and Risk Factors: Pushing Boundaries in Public Health Research and Policy

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to advance research in cancer epidemiology, emphasizing novel methodologies, interdisciplinary approaches, and actionable insights to inform public health policy and practice. By addressing these gaps, it seeks to promote innovative strategies for prevention, detection, and management, contributing to a deeper understanding of cancer etiology and solutions to reduce the global cancer burden. We are pleased to invite you to contribute to this Special Issue, welcoming original research on cancer epidemiology, innovative methodologies, interdisciplinary approaches, and policy analyses relevant to cancer prevention, early detection, and management. High-quality systematic reviews and clinical studies that offer valuable insights into this critical area of public health are also encouraged. We look forward to your valuable contributions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Cancers (ISSN 2072-6694) is an international, online journal addressing both clinical and basic science issues related to cancer research. The journal will continue its open access format, which will certainly evolve to ensure that the journal takes full advantage of the rapidly changing world of information and knowledge dissemination. It publishes high-quality clinical, translational, and basic science research on cancer prevention, initiation, progression, and treatment, as well as other related topics, particularly to capture the most seminal studies in the rapidly growing area of immunology, immunotherapy, and tumor microenvironment.
