Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue offers a unique opportunity to contribute to a state-of-the-art series on anxiety disorders in children and young people, including but not limited to the following major areas: epidemiology and developmental trajectories, causation (including family-based risk factors with cross-generational influences and intergenerational transmission), psychological and pharmacological treatments, newer concepts like parental health anxiety by proxy, and child health-related fear in the face of the global pandemic of COVID-19. I am delighted with the initiative taken by Children to launch this Special Issue. Children's 2019 Journal Impact Factor is 2.078, and it is ranked 50 out of 128 journals in the category of Pediatrics. Submissions from experts in child anxiety disorders—clinicians and researchers—around the world are welcome. Manuscript formats can vary from literature reviews (systematic literature reviews and meta-analyses or narrative reviews) to original research (clinical trials, cohort studies, experimental lab work, case-control studies, qualitative studies), as long as they are of high quality and advance the field within childhood anxiety.
