

Special Issue

Epidemiology and Injury Morphology of Childhood Traumatic Fractures

Message from the Guest Editors

Pediatric traumatology is a constantly developing discipline, and absorbable implants are gaining more and more space in this field. The presentation of the experiences and the results of the method are essential for the new method to spread widely. In this Special Issue, we provide an opportunity to present the novelties in a high-quality scientific journal to specialists dealing with pediatric orthopedics and traumatology. Moreover, we are seeking the basic science of the studies of resorbable implants.
