Pediatric Trauma Readiness and Management in Emergency and Critical Care

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue will focus on pediatric readiness for acute emergency care both in specialized pediatric centers and in general emergency departments and pre-hospital care. It will highlight current evidence and existing national and international programs addressing pediatric readiness, provide a best-practice framework for creating readiness within different settings, and recognize aspects requiring further research and quality improvement and discuss them in the context of pediatric resuscitation, with a special focus on trauma and mass casualty preparedness.
