

Special Issue

Surgery in Locally Advanced and Metastatic Renal Cell Carcinoma

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue of Current Oncology explores the role of surgery in managing locally advanced and metastatic renal cell carcinoma (RCC). Despite progress in systemic and radiotherapy treatments, surgery remains a key component of care for advanced RCC. This issue emphasizes recent surgical developments and strategies for effectively integrating surgery into a multidisciplinary treatment framework. It features both original research and comprehensive review articles that address the current and future roles of surgery in treating advanced RCC, providing valuable insights for healthcare professionals and researchers in the field.
