Radical Surgery Advances in Oncology

Message from the Guest Editors

With the progressive implementation of robotic surgery and novel technologies availability, the management of urological malignancies is rapidly evolving. In this Special Issue we will provide an overview of the most recent either surgical or clinical advances achieved in major uro-oncologic procedures ranging from the state of the art for milestone techniques such as laparoscopic radical nephrectomy to the latest innovations achieved in bladder and renal cancer landscapes. This Special Issue aims to provide an insight in the latest clinical and technological advancements in major uro-oncologic procedures:

- Novel approaches to radical prostatectomy
- Introduction of novel technologies in the uro-pathologic specimens' evaluation
- New scoring system for the assessment of surgical quality and functional outcomes for the treatment of urologic cancers
- Real-time application of 3D technology to robotic platforms during major uro-oncologic surgery
- Evolution of surgical indications according to robotic surgery and ancillary technologies
- Robotic management of urologic complications during pelvic oncologic surgery
