

Special Issue

Innovations and Trends in Modern Orthodontics

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to bridge traditional orthodontic practices with cutting-edge technologies that are reshaping treatment strategies and elevating the standard of patient care. This Special Issue will also examine the growing interdisciplinary connections between orthodontics and general health— focusing on areas such as airway development, respiratory function, and sleep quality. In addition, it will address the implementation of new treatment philosophies in multidisciplinary dental practice. The growing role of increasing use of temporary anchorage devices (TADs) will be explored as a minimally invasive yet highly effective biomechanical tool.

Join us in contributing to this exciting and rapidly evolving field. We look forward to receiving your submissions.
