Dental Materials and Their Clinical Applications

Message from the Guest Editor

The field of dental materials is in constant and progressive development, and the consequences in the clinical setting are significant. Over the last few years, innovations have been introduced in every dental area and specialty, and this has profoundly changed workflows and provided new therapeutic options to offer to patients. For this reason, today it is extremely important to keep up to date, both on the development of materials and on the news regarding application techniques. The purpose of this issue is to welcome your valuable contribution on the topic "Dental Materials and Their Clinical Applications"; laboratory tests, literature reviews, new clinical application techniques and clinical cases that can be stimulating and inspiring for readers are welcome. I hope you accept this invitation. I wish you all the best in your research and look forward to your potential contribution.
