

Special Issue

Diagnostics in the Emergency and Critical Care Medicine

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to improve the care of patients with emergency and critical illness by acquiring, discussing, distributing, and promoting evidence-based information relevant to emergency physicians and intensivists. In particular, we welcome articles related to the diagnostics of emergency and critical care patients, including but not limited to the risk stratification of the critically ill syndrome, diagnosis of a certain disease/complication/syndrome, and risk stratification. The issue will publish original articles, reviews, technical notes, case reports, and interesting images covering all aspects of emergency and critical care medicine, including but not limited to trauma, anesthesiology, respiratory failure, sepsis, cardiovascular disease, healthcare-associated infections prevention, and end-of-life care.
