Diagnosis and Management of Thoracic Diseases

Message from the Guest Editor

Thoracic diseases are common and important health issues. Infectious diseases like COVID-19 and thoracic malignancies belong to this particular disease category. Millions of people are affected by thoracic diseases around the world, and the number continues to rise without doubt. To deal with these diseases, scientists and clinicians are inventing novel treatments including different diagnostic tools and drugs, as well as new interventional technology. Therefore, in this Special Issue, we aim to collect articles focusing on cutting-edge diagnostic tools and new therapies for thoracic diseases. Moreover, exploring biomarkers and disease screening/prognoses also falls within our scope and interests. With this Special Issue, we aim to improve our knowledge and strengthen our faith, fighting back against health-threatening thoracic diseases.
