Message from the Guest Editor

This 2nd Special Issue will highlight recent advances as well as persistent gaps in the diagnosis and management of retinal diseases, with a dedicated focus on pediatric retinal care and the integration of novel technologies aimed at improving early detection and access to treatment. We welcome original research, reviews, and clinical studies that explore the following:

- Diagnostic challenges and emerging solutions in both adult and pediatric retinal diseases.
- The critical role of early detection in pediatric retina and its impact on long-term outcomes.
- The application of OCT and OCT angiography in identifying early disease biomarkers.
- The use of AI and telemedicine in retinal disease screening, diagnosis, and monitoring.
- Innovations in medical and surgical treatments across a spectrum of retinal conditions, including AMD, diabetic retinopathy, inherited retinal diseases, and ROP.
- Strategies to overcome disparities in access to retina care globally.
