Clinical Diagnosis of Joints and Ligamentous Injury

Message from the Guest Editors

Diagnostics publishes high-quality articles, in all areas of medical science and related disciplines after peer review and acceptance with a fast process. Diagnostics is an open access journal with an Impact Factor of 3.992 (2022 Journal Citation Reports). Diagnostics is going to open a Special Issue entitled "Clinical Diagnosis of Joints and Ligamentous Injury". This Special Issue is going to publish original research articles focusing on research in joints and ligaments written by orthopaedic surgeons, musculoskeletal radiologists, rheumatologists, or musculoskeletal anatomists for clinicians with a special interest in joint trauma or pathology. We are interested in joint and ligaments injuries research on clinical and surgical consideration, surgical reconstruction, or biomechanics considerations. Particular attention is going to be given to high-quality illustrations, which are very important for understanding clinical problems. We are looking for relevant manuscripts for joint and ligaments injuries clinical evaluation, diagnosis, treatment or rehabilitation. If possible, I would appreciate receiving your submission by 31 May 2023.
