Biochemical Testing Applications in Clinical Diagnosis

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue of Diagnostics is dedicated to the applications of biochemical testing in clinical diagnosis. It focuses on the use of advanced biochemical techniques to improve the accuracy and timeliness of medical diagnoses. The articles cover a wide range of topics, including the identification of new biomarkers, the development of innovative analytical techniques, and the implementation of point-of-care tests. The main objective is to highlight how biochemical tests can revolutionize early diagnosis and disease management, thus improving clinical outcomes. Original contributions, reviews, and clinical studies are invited to provide a comprehensive overview of the latest discoveries and practical applications in this crucial field of medicine. I look forward to receiving your contribution.
