Chronic Wounds: Diagnosis and Management

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue, "Chronic Wounds: Diagnosis and Management," is dedicated to advancing the understanding and precision of diagnosing chronic wounds. It highlights the latest diagnostic techniques, assessment protocols, and clinical decision-making frameworks for the accurate identification of chronic wound conditions. This collection of articles explores the complexities of wound assessment, including risk factors, wound classification systems, and the role of advanced imaging modalities. By providing comprehensive insights into diagnostic approaches, this Special Issue aims to empower healthcare professionals to make informed treatment decisions, ultimately leading to improved patient outcomes in the management of chronic wounds.
