Precision Diagnosis and Management of Inflammatory Bowel Diseases in the Context of Personalized Medicine

Message from the Guest Editor

Inflammatory bowel diseases (IBDs), including Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis, are recognized as chronic, progressive, non-curable diseases that are immune-mediated in adults and children alike. IBDs can cause significant morbidity and may lead to cancer, fistulas, infections, and strictures. The symptoms of IBDs are variable, and the delayed diagnosis of IBDs is common, especially in Crohn's disease, which is associated with adverse outcomes. Early diagnosis and the prompt establishment of optimal, personalized treatments are essential conditions for maximizing the patient's health status.
