Advances in the Diagnosis and Management of ENT Diseases

Message from the Guest Editors

ENT specialists have the privilege of dealing with an extremely interesting body area with a complex anatomical structure and function. It is a wide specialty where rapid progress in diagnosis, treatment and management can be observed in rhinology, otology and upper aerodigestive tract disorders. Additionally, ENT continues progress in the diagnosis and therapy of head and neck cancers, and participates in the development of increasingly effective methods of diagnosing and treating sleep breathing disorders. The primary goal of this Special Issue is to advance the knowledge of ENT scientific progress and achievements. We invite all researchers in the field to contribute to this Issue in the form of systematic reviews, original research articles or short communications, as well as case reports.
