Primary and Secondary Hypertension: Novelty in Diagnosis and Treatment

Message from the Guest Editor

In this Special Issue, we encourage authors to submit original research papers or review articles presenting novel results on the following topics:

- Screening and diagnostic methods for 'primary' and 'secondary' hypertension.
- Diagnostic instruments for early identification of hypertension-mediated organ damage, including vascular remodeling, heart remodeling, renal impairment, cerebrovascular disease (e.g., measuring arterial stiffness, new markers of hypertension nephropathy).
- Recent findings in the treatment of hypertension: Are there new potential treatments? What about renal denervation and sympathetic activity modulation?
- New evidence on the workup (diagnosis and treatment) of resistant hypertension.
