Application of AI in Diagnosis of Colorectal Cancer

Message from the Guest Editor

The incidence of colorectal cancer has increased markedly after COVID-19. Innovation is important in the treatment of this disease. In this publication, we would like to focus on new treatment possibilities and especially the importance of robotic surgery. Robotic surgery has incorporated many improvements such as 3D visualization, articulating instruments assisting complex and precise movements. As a result, robotic colorectal surgery shows less time to oral intake, a smaller conversion rate and shortened hospital length of stay compared to open and laparoscopic surgery. Costs may also be reduced in future. In this Special Edition, we invite valuable papers about this subject.
