Advanced Brain Tumor Imaging

Message from the Guest Editors

According to the recent World Health Organization (WHO) classification, brain tumors include a variety of different tumor types originating from the central nervous system. Furthermore, the brain may be involved in the metastatic spread of tumors arising from other anatomical sites. Imaging methods may be extremely useful for diagnosis, monitoring, treatment response assessment, and for obtaining prognostic information in patients with brain tumors. This Special Issue aims to gather articles concerning advanced imaging techniques in brain tumors. This includes, but is not limited to, advanced magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) techniques and positron emission tomography (PET) with different radiopharmaceuticals.
