Fetal Doppler Assessment: From Basic Research to Clinical Practice

Message from the Guest Editor

We are pleased to announce a call for papers for the special issue titled "Fetal Doppler Assessment: From Basic Research to Clinical Practice" in the journal Diagnostics. As I invite researchers, clinicians, and scientists from around the globe to submit their high-quality research contributions focused on the use of fetal Doppler technology in both basic science and clinical practice. This special issue aims to highlight the latest developments in the field, covering a wide range of topics, including but not limited to:

- The role of fetal Doppler in assessing fetal growth restriction (FGR)
- Advances in Doppler imaging techniques and technology
- Applications of fetal Doppler in preeclampsia, placental abruption, and other complications
- The clinical utility of Doppler in assessing fetal heart, cerebral, and hepatic circulation
- Mechanisms underlying fetal-placental hemodynamics
- The potential of Doppler ultrasound as a predictive tool for adverse pregnancy outcomes
- Integrating fetal Doppler findings into clinical practice: challenges and opportunities

We look forward to receiving your valuable submissions.
