Tuberculosis Detection and Diagnosis 2025

Message from the Guest Editor

We are excited to announce the Special Issue on “Tuberculosis Detection and Diagnosis 2025”. As tuberculosis (TB) continues to pose a significant global health threat, innovative detection and diagnostic strategies are crucial for improving patient outcomes and controlling the spread of the disease. This issue aims to spotlight the latest advancements and methodologies in TB diagnostics, inviting contributions from researchers and clinicians dedicated to this vital field. Our goal is to compile groundbreaking research that enhances our understanding and capabilities in TB detection and diagnosis. By focusing on cutting-edge technologies and methods, this collection will align with the journal’s mission to advance knowledge in infectious diseases. We aim to gather high-quality articles that reflect significant findings from laboratories and clinical settings.
