

Special Issue

Urinary Tract Infections: Advances in Diagnosis and Management

Message from the Guest Editor

The purpose of this Special Issue is threefold. First, we will review various methods for urinalysis, including the more recently introduced automated technology. Second, we will discuss the clinical utility and disutility of various findings. Finally, we will discuss indications for testing. Original research articles, reviews, short communications, and interesting images are welcome, as well as either clinical or basic research.
