Implementation Science for Point-of-Care Diagnostics

Message from the Guest Editor

The advent of the novel Coronavirus 2019 (COVID-19) pandemic has fuelled technological innovation and led to the development and deployment of new point-of-care screening and diagnostic methods. These methods could be adapted for use for other communicable and non-communicable diseases. The rapid uptake of the newly developed diagnostics requires a systematic approach to bridge the research-to-practice gap. The implementation of science can help to address this need by promoting the systematic uptake of newly developed point-of-care diagnostic services research findings and other evidence-based practices into routine practice in order to improve the quality and effectiveness of these services.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

You are cordially invited to submit research articles, short communications, comprehensive reviews, case reports or interesting images for consideration and publication in Diagnostics (ISSN 2075-4418). Diagnostics is published in open access format – research articles, reviews and other contents are released on the Internet immediately after acceptance. The scientific community and the general public have unlimited and free access to the content as soon as it is published. We would be pleased to welcome you as one of our authors.
