Sustainable Landscapes: Integrating Physical Geography, Ecotourism, and Nature Conservation

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to explore the synergy between physical geography, ecotourism, and the protection of nature in promoting sustainable landscape management. As tourism increasingly intersects with fragile natural environments, understanding the physical characteristics of landscapes and their ecological sensitivities becomes essential for planning, conservation, and policy-making. We welcome the submission of interdisciplinary articles that analyze how physical geography informs sustainable ecotourism practices, assess the impacts of tourism on natural landscapes, or propose innovative conservation strategies grounded in geomorphology, hydrology, biogeography, and climate science.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Earth journal is a publishing platform to promote discoveries related to the Earth and its components (atmosphere, oceans, land, cryosphere, biosphere, and humans). The journal serves as a publishing venue that views Earth from a holistic perspective and disseminates scientific papers with emphases on multidisciplinary approaches to understand the complexities and interactions occurring on a variety of spatial and temporal scales. Rapid turnaround time and full open access offer the opportunity to make research results immediately available to scientific communities and the general public.
