Novel Insights in the Leadership in Business and Economics

Message from the Guest Editor

Our world is changing quickly, and what was impossible 2–3 years ago has now become a reality. The concept of leadership and leaders has also undergone profound transformations. The recent COVID-19 pandemic caused a digital surge in the ways business or education are perceived or conducted. Hence, there is a need for an update in leadership in business and economics that would bring new insights into this topic and define its place within the context of Sustainable Development Goals. This Special Issue aims at researching novel insights in leadership in business and economics from various approaches and points of view, including economic theory, management, marketing, as well as behavioural economics, institutional economics, political economy, agricultural economics, international trade, labour economics, or green banking and finance.
