Message from the Guest Editors

We are interested not only in the education of student teachers but also, and to an equal degree, in in-service teacher training. The continuation of ECE teacher professional development has increased in importance due to constantly growing requirements and, at the same time, often intensified working conditions. Globally, the turnover rate of ECE teachers is high, leading to labor shortages and weaker ECE quality. However, it appears that being prepared and committed, having the support of the community, and a willingness to develop oneself may contribute to staying in the profession and improving one’s enjoyment of it. Mentoring, teamwork, good leadership, and a fair apportionment of tasks are factors that need to be taught and maintained through a teacher’s professional life.

In this Special Issue, we welcome papers that deal with ECE teacher education, methods and ontological questions, motivation, well-being, the attractiveness of the career, lifelong learning, and professional development in ECE.
