Message from the Guest Editors

The treatment of talent is an important issue in education. It is firstly important to identify it, in order to then provide the most appropriate educational response for talented students. For this reason, this monograph aims to collate research on this topic, in its various aspects, with a specific focus on the different talents (creative, intellectual, musical, and artistic), the processes to determine that they exist, the educational response and their evaluation, as well as more theoretical aspects (such as the characterization of talent and its related variables).

I/we look forward to receiving your contributions.
