Challenge-Based and Community-Based Teaching and Learning in Engineering and STEM Education

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue encourages authors to “tell their respective stories”, i.e., provide salient details about the specifications for the implementation design(s), need and opportunity, descriptions of the consequential choices made in the projects selected, and analysis of the impact data collected, if available. In this Special Issue, original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but not limited to) the following:

- Challenge-based learning experiences in various fields of engineering (industrial, biomedical, mechanical, biotechnology, etc.);
- STEM education projects with underserved communities/community-based research;
- Community-based research approaches to learning and teaching engineering design;
- Engineering for the wellbeing of communities, social justice, and sustainability;
- Community-based engineering;
- Problem-based teaching and learning in various fields of engineering;
- Project-based teaching and learning in K-12 engineering and STEM education.

We look forward to receiving your contributions.
